

MOKENA COUPLE HITCH-HIKE 2400 EVENTFUL MILES

In an interview with Col. and Mrs. Don C. Hall of Mokena who have just returned from an eight day hitch-hiking tour, taking them to Casper, Wyoming, and "Days of '76" at Deadwood, South Dakota and return, a distance of approximately 2500 miles, in an answer to the question, "What do you deem the most essential element in a tour of this kind?" Colonel Hall replied:

"An unbiased mind, a ready conception of fact and a retentive memory."

"In this most interesting journey and in riding with some 60 different drivers in a variety of makes of cars, through a diversified section of the country, at an especially seasonable time of the year, we gleaned a harvest of information most valuable to the open mind just at this time."

"What was your real purpose in taking this trip?" we inquired. "Recreation in mind and body and a desire to get a keen insight into the minds of men from direct contact and association," was the reply.

"But the danger" we were about to ask. "Hitch-hiking" is conducive to greater safety in travel," the Col. replied. "The driver uses more care when he has a passenger, he is wider awake, more keenly alert and is not preoccupied or effected by the monotony of the road."

"What class of people pick you up?" "There is but one class of people and all interesting as we find them," said the Colonel. "Just individual units of the great whole of humanity, all acknowledging the same facts seen from different angles of approach and all recognizing the existence of the same God over us all."

"We have ridden with men and women of all sects and creeds and social affiliation, the rich and the poor, clergymen, priests, members of each profession."

"We left Mokena August 1st at 11 a. m. and were picked up by a Federal Investigator from the U. S. Department of Justice driving from New York who carried us to Joliet and we were brought home to our very door at Mokena by a gentleman who is a salesman for one of the most important essentials in use in the refineries of certain gasoline fuel for motives."

"Then along the way, a District Attorney, a Judge, lady members of a Normal school faculty, across the plains of South Dakota."

"We rode in trucks, some piled high with merchandise, cattle cars, and rumble seats in coups, and with the finest equipped, best and cleanest of the auto manufacture's product, and we enjoyed every moment of the time."

"You certainly went some" we suggested. "Yes and the best of it all is that we all enjoyed it," said Mrs. Hall, who is as ardent a traveler as is the Colonel.

They have hitch-hiked over 15000 miles in the last 2 1/2 years.

"The world is big enough for everybody, if we are big enough for the world," says the Colonel.

FIRE DESTROYS GREEN TAVERN IN NEW LENOX

The Green Pantry restaurant and Green Tavern which were located on the Lincoln highway at New Lenox, were destroyed by fire early Wednesday morning. As New Lenox has no fire fighting apparatus a bucket brigade was the only means to fight the fire with, but the towns people were helpless to quell the blaze. The buildings were destroyed as a total loss and the damage was estimated at about $4,000. It is reported that the blaze started of an unknown origin in the tavern between 3 and 4 o'clock Wednesday morning. James Sherwood of McIntosh subdivision, proprietor of the establishments said the flames spread rapidly and there was no possibility of saving any of the contents of the tavern building. Neighbors however succeeded in removing a stove and an ice box from the restaurant before that structure went up.

August Zeigler, owner of the buildings, had them covered by insurance. Mr. Zeigler purchased this property from George Kennedy several months ago. All that was left after the fire was a slot machine cabinet, in which it is said several slot machines were stored, cash register, and a cigaret cabinet.

We know that the public will respond to our call and help by entering their exhibits. There will be an unusual variety of exhibits to choose from this year and surely everyone will find something to capture their interest and ambition to try to prove their skill at either raising beautiful flowers, perfect vegetables or showing their artistic ability in arranging flowers.

A special interest has been shown in the miniature landscaping arranged in shallow boxes, filled with sand. Quite a few children have already entered the contest and are busy experimenting. It is interesting to watch them developing their ideas about the ideal surroundings for a play yard, or a back yard to fit their needs. Rock gardens take up much of their space and pools are popular.

SYNOPSIS

Richard Exon, a poor young Englishman, befriends elderly Matthew Gering, who at his death, gives him a statement claiming he, Gering, is Rudolph Elbert Virgil, Count of Brief, of ancient Austrian nobility who was betrayed 20 years before by his twin brother, Ferdinand, whose sentence for forgery he himself served. Ferdinand appropriated his title, property and daughter. Before he dies, Gering tells Exon there is a family secret, known only to the head of the house, to be found in the great tower at Brief, by a doorway none can ever find. Exon inherits his uncle's fortune and sets out to right Gering's wrongs. En route he encounters Percy Virgil, son of the villainous Ferdinand and sees him in conference with Inskip, a diamond merchant. He engages a valet, Winter, who hates Percy and meets by chance at a garage, John Herrick, who is a linguist and who as a youth served as a page at Gering's wedding, and had visited Brief. Herrick, due eventually to fall into an inheritance, is at present unemployed and seeking pleasant work to while away a few months. Exon and Herrick establish headquarters at Brenda Revok's farm at Raven, a few miles from Brief and make their plans. They find the castle almost inaccessible at first, but at the mouth of the entrance drive several days later, they see a closed car occupied by Percy Virgil, a chauffeur and a woman and hear talk of a wire and a change of clothes. Percy returns to the house. Hearing a dog scream, they see the chauffeur dragging it, just as a horse with a girl astride bounds along the path and is felled by the strung wire. The girl, unconscious, is picked up carelessly by the chauffeur and woman.

I looked over my shoulder, still 12 feet up, to see the man and the woman lay the girl down in the track which led to the car. They paid her no sort of attention, but after a hurried word, the man turned back to the ride and the woman ran down the track and out of my sight.

I think it was then that I thought that they meant her ill, for both of them need not have left her in any case. Be that as it may, I hung where I was for an instant, to let the fellow go by. Had he looked, he must have seen me, for I was fully exposed, but his eyes were fixed on something I could not see.

I leaped the last six feet, and before I turned to the girl, I looked after the man. In so doing I saw the chauffeur, walking across the ride—at the spot where the bay took his fall—hastily coiling the wire which had brought him down.

For a moment I stared, unable to credit my eyes.

Then I whipped to the girl, who was yet lying still as death, and, picking her up in my arms, ran out of the track and into the thick of the bracken until I could run no more.

CHAPTER III

I afterwards found I had run a quarter of a mile, which shows, I think, that fear can lend a man strength which he does not possess. Be that as it may, I laid the girl down as gently as I knew how—and then lay down beside her to get my breath.

Of course I knew who she was and I knew I had seen an attempt to carry her off. And I knew that I had been sent to bring that attempt to naught. I prayed that I had succeeded—with all my heart.

From the way she had lain in my arms I was sure that she was not dead, but I felt that she ought to have water, to bring her to life. And then I heard the speech of a rill . . .

Two minutes later, perhaps, a hand went up to her head.

"It's all right," said I, "lie still. You took the deuce of a toss."

Lady Elizabeth Virgil opened two large, gray eyes.

"The dog," she said. "Who was it beating that dog in that merciless way?"

"It's all right," said I. "He stopped when he saw you come down."

"And Caesar?" she cried, sitting up. "Where's Caesar—the horse I was riding?"

"Unhurt," said I. "He may be going spare, but he's not going short. And now will you please lie down and let me look round?"

After a steady stare, she did as I said.

I got to my knees and peered through the tops of the bracken, but all was still.

As I sat back on my heels—

"Why did you want to look round?"

"Because you are still in danger. You were brought down on purpose. A wire was across the ride."

Lady Elizabeth looked at me very hard.

"How do you know?"

"I saw it taken away. I saw the whole thing. The fellow was thrashing the dog to draw you that way."

There was a little silence.

Then—

"Who arranged this . . . melodrama?"

"Your cousin, Percy," said I. "I saw him at work."

After a long silence she let out a little laugh.

"That rings true," she said shortly. And then, "Who are you?"

"My name's Richard Exon," I said. "A—friend of yours told me about you."

"I didn't know I had any friends."

"You've Herrick and me," I said quickly. "His mother was a friend of your mother's, and I was a friend of—the friend I mentioned just now."

The girl regarded me straightly. "I can't remember my mother," "I know," said I. "The Countess Rudolph was killed before you were two years old."

With that, I got again to my knees, to throw a look round.

As I did so, I heard a car coming—gathering speed.

Till then I had no idea that we were so close to the drive, and for one distracting moment it seemed as though the closed car were heading directly for us. Then it switched to its right a short six paces away, and before ten seconds had passed we could hear it no more.

"Was that them?" said Lady Elizabeth.

I nodded.

"That's right. Gone empty away."

"What do you mean—empty?"

"They were to have taken you with them—I don't know where."

My lady sat up.

"Are you sure of this?"

"Quite sure. I'll tell you everything later." Cautiously I got to my feet. "D'you think you could could leap into a flame, but once you had seen it, you never could forget it, because forever after all other eyes seemed dull. Her hair was soft and shining and black as night, and the face which it framed was strong and proud and fearless, but something sad. I think it was the droop of her lips that gave her this wistful air, but you could not have wished it absent, because that might have altered the shape of her faultless mouth.

I had to carry her over a stream before I saw through the trees the flash of the Rolls. I never was so thankful, for though she made no complaint, I knew it was all she could do to stay up on her feet, and I had a dreadful fear that to strive with the effects of concussion might do her some serious ill.

Winter saw us coming and had a door open, for her to get into the car: this she did without speaking and at once lay back on the cushions and closed her eyes.

Herrick was not to be seen, but since he was sure to return by the entrance-drive and the road, I bade Winter take the wheel and make for the spot at which he had set us down. If he was not in sight when we got there, I meant to go on to manage to walk? My car's not very far off."

"There's nothing the matter with me, but why should I walk to your car?"

I hesitated. Then—

"Because I beg you," I said. "I'll tell you everything later—indeed, I will. But now we've not a moment to lose. Directly Caesar gets in, the alarm will be raised: and I don't want you to be found until after you've heard my tale. Please trust me till then. You really are in danger—what happened just now must show you that your cousin will stick at nothing to put you out of the way."

Finger to lip, Lady Elizabeth Virgil appeared to reflect. At length she rose to her feet.

"All right," she said. "I'll trust you. Where is this car?"

When I told her, she glanced about her. Then she pointed across the drive.

"That's our quickest way. But how do we come to be here? I came off in the Golden Ride."

"I carried you here," said I.

"They left you halfway to the car, so I picked you up and cleared out before they came back."

A hand went up to her head.

"So far as I can make out, I've a great deal to thank you for. But I can't think as straight as I should. And when we get to your car, are you going to drive me to Brief?"

"I'd like to drive you to Raven."

"To Raven? Do you know Raven?"

"That's where we're staying," said I.

"All right. I don't care. I'd like to see Brenda again. I'll lie down there for a while. When you've been knocked out, you're never quite right till you've slept."

Though she seemed to have taken no hurt, she was not fit to walk as far as the Rolls: yet I was afraid to offer to fetch the car, in case, before I got back, the hunt should be up. There was, therefore, nothing for it. Fortune had laid on my anvil a red-hot iron. If I did not strike it now . . .

When she had stumbled twice, without a word I took her right arm and set it about my neck: then I put my left arm about her and held her up.

I am given to understand that she had her mother's looks, but I find it hard to believe that the Countess Rudolph had all of her daughter's charm. I have said before that her eyes were large and gray, but I despair of disclosing the exquisite light which made them so very rare. This was a very soft brilliance, which Raven and then return, but, as luck would have it, we met him at the mouth of the track.

He was plainly bursting with news, but I was down in the road before he could speak—

"I've got her," I breathed. "She's coming with us to Raven. But don't say a word in the car—she's not too well."

Then we both got into the Rolls, and Winter let in his clutch.

"It's very seldom," said Herrick, "that Fortune makes up her mind to do a thing really well. She almost always leaves you with two or three little knots, and you have to try to cut them . . . But here she's excelled herself, for I came upon the scene of the outrage as you went off, and so I can complete the astonishing tale you've just told."

"But before I do that, let's go back. Between us, we saw the whole thing. We saw Percy meet his bulles and lead them off to the ride. There, of course, he told them exactly what they were to do, watched them fix the wire and placed them in the positions which they were to occupy—the chauffeur at the end of the ride to watch for my lady's approach, and the woman to show him his place as soon as he'd seen her go by. And when Percy had posted them, he went back to the house. That's not guesswork. I saw him. Two minutes after you'd left me, he whipped through the fields below me, up to the house and in by the door at the foot of a staircase-turret. Back to bed, of course—and there's his alibi. Nobody saw him go out, and nobody saw him come in . . .

"My lady must have appeared just after I'd made up my mind to return to the Rolls. Anyway, I didn't see her. But I saw the closed car, as you did: and, as you did, I crawled up to have a good look. Before I was through, I heard that unfortunate dog, and without thinking what I was doing, I started along the track. Then the dog stopped screaming, and I re-entered the bracken, just about ten paces in rear of the car."

"I was wondering where you were and whether to follow the track or go back to the Rolls, when I saw the woman approaching between the trees. She was blowed and out of breath and went by at a shambling run, and when she got to the car, she swung the door wide open and then stood biting her nails and staring the way she had come."

"Presently along comes the chauffeur, sweating great drops, with a coil of rebellious wire, and going as fast as he knew."

"Where is she?" he cries. 'Have you got her?'

"The woman lets out a gasp."

"Me?" she bleats. 'Max has got her. He sent me on.'

"Max hasn't got her," cries the chauffeur, and the woman goes white as a sheet."

"The next moment, up comes Max, with his eyes bulging out of his head."

"When they told him she wasn't there, he threw the best part of a fit before my eyes. Then they all ran back in a bunch, like so many frantic beasts, to where she ought to have been. Less than two minutes elapsed before they came stumbling back, all three disputing hoarsely and, naturally, blaming each other for what had occurred. Bang opposite where I was lying the woman fell upon Max and scratched his face to glory before the chauffeur was able to pull her off. Then she fell down in a heap and burst into tears, and Max did his best to kick her till the chauffeur landed a good one and knocked him down. But for him, they'd have been there now, for he was the only one that wasn't beside himself."

"D'you want to be taken?" he hissed. "That cursed horse is back in the stables by now, and in two minutes' time the hue and cry will be raised. And if we're to be found, we're done. That Jew will show us no mercy—he'll lead the pack: and he'll hound us into prison for 20 years."

"That brought the others up to their feet and into the car, and 30 seconds later the latter was out of my sight."

"Well, there you are. We know the whole truth of the matter from first to last, and, thanks to your enterprise, we have in our hands the remarkably beautiful subject of their activities. As I said two days ago, you're one of Fortune's pets: but you know how to use your luck—I'll give you that. It would never have entered my head to carry the lady off."

"Of course it would," said I.

"No, it wouldn't," said Herrick. "I might have rescued her: but after that I should have taken her home."

Termites Have Been Present in This Country for Centuries; Not Imported

Contrary to popular opinion termites are not "new" insects imported from the tropics. They have been present in this country for centuries. But it is only lately that the general public has become aware of them as destructive insects. As the forests are becoming depleted and they are deprived of their natural habitats, they seek other sources of wood—houses among them—for food and shelter, writes Dr. Michael Ference in the Chicago Tribune.

Several types of destructive termites exist in this country. The subterranean or ground-burrowing type is most widespread and devastating.

Because these subterranean termites shun light and remain hidden from view, the damage which they accomplish often reaches an advanced stage, with the infested lumber becoming structurally weak and unsafe, before the termites are so much as discovered.

Even more destructive to wood—and homes—in this country are the low parasitic forms of plant life known as rot-producing fungi, causing damage that runs into millions of dollars a year.

They thrive under a wide range of moisture, temperature, and food conditions. The particular variety with which we are concerned feed on the cellulose found in wood.

The spores of these fungi lodge in the crevices of wood. If conditions are favorable (moisture, temperature, food) they germinate rapidly, emitting a labyrinth-like branchwork of destructive filaments which finally permeate the membranes of the affected wood.

This condition is known as dry rot or decay.

Some types of wood are less subject than others to fungus attack, but unfortunately the resistant woods are very expensive and are seldom used for construction purposes.

The Mata-Mata Turtle

The Mata-Mata turtle, a native of South American lakes and rivers, resembles a floating log, to which an enormous leaf has been attached as head. A fisherman for his livelihood, the Mata-Mata seldom leaves the water in his native haunts. From his snout extends a small periscope, through which he breathes on land.

Two Pretty Frocks, Both Easy to Make

1559 1468

IF YOU'RE one of those women who so often say "Dear me, I wish I could sew!", then by all means try your hand on these smart designs, and like many, many others, just as inexperienced as you are, you'll find that you can sew, and enjoy it! Our patterns include detailed sew charts that show you just what to do, step by step.

The Woman's Dress.

Here we have a diagram design, which means you can finish it successfully in a few hours. And you'll find it one of the most becoming and comfortable you ever wore around the house. The short sleeves are slashed, which makes them easier to work in, and prettier to look at. Sleeves, neckline and pointed closing are trimmed with ricrac. Make this dress of gingham, seersucker, percale or calico.

The Little Girl's Dress.

This dress will make your small daughter look even more adorable, with its high, snug waist, square neck, puff sleeves and full skirt. You'll probably want to make her half a dozen dresses just like this! And she'll certainly beg for a little sweetheart apron. For the dress, choose dimity, dotted Swiss, gingham or percale. For the apron, organdy, dimity or lawn.

The Patterns.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Get more fresh air 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. WELL WORTH TRYING!

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste.

Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

Grocers, restaurants, hotels and other handlers of food, know insect killers. It is truly significant when such a great number of them select DWIN for their own use. "Soul" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, August 14.

The Golden Text was, "Hear me speedily, O Lord . . . cause me to hear thy loving kindness in the morning; for in thee do I trust: cause me to know the way wherein I should walk; for I lift up my soul unto thee" (Psalms 143, 7, 8).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "I will bless the Lord at all times; his praise shall continually be in my mouth. My soul shall make her boast in the Lord: the humble shall hear thereof, and be glad. O magnify the Lord with me, and let us exalt his name together" (Psalms 34:1-3).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Soul, or Spirit, is God, unchangeable and eternal; and man coexists with and reflects Soul. God, for man is God's image" (p. 120).

By Zeb Potter

Dear Fred:

I suppose down in New York state you have quite a bit of unemployment. Out here in the Middle West around Chicago we are faced with the same problem — many men out of work and forced by conditions to labor on WPA projects.

It seems to me, Fred, that the politicians have not clearly thought through this problem of unemployment, or they do not choose to do so in fear of losing votes.

In Cook county, road building contractors have been faced with a series of strikes by labor simply because the machine methods of road building are throwing the men out of jobs. The grading, I quote from a labor union official's report, is done by machines. The forms for the concrete are delivered ready cut to the job. The concrete arrives ready mixed and is spread mechanically.

In Joliet for example, the idle sit on the court house curb and watch machines with a few laborers lay the paving on Jefferson street. Why is it? Modern conditions demand speed. A street can be tied up just so long and people begin to howl. Speed, speed, and more speed, and you have the unemployed around with plenty of time on their hands.

No kidding, in this day and age we shall have to go back to the handicraft stage. Shoes, hats, suits, and what have you, must be made by human hands, not machines, to give these hands employment.

Continually throwing out this money from Washington just to pep business up, I believe is just more a temporary lift. We got to get down to fundamentals in our thinking and face the facts and not be kidding ourselves too much about these conditions.

I have maintained all along that good level headed citizens in Tinley Park, Mokena, Orland, and New Lenox, are just as effective in straightening things out as the paid expert in Springfield and in Washington.

Until we can get back to the old town meeting days of figuring local problems, we are going to be whipped. It's the indifference, Fred, of the tax payer in the administration of local government that hinders progress and permits the politicians to become lax in their duties.

Well, I'll be seeing you later, and don't get discouraged.

Your friend,

ZEB POTTER.

Need of State Banks

Although there is no organized opposition to the proposal for a constitutional amendment in Illinois to eliminate double liability on stock of state banks, the campaign of those who are interested in a big vote in November is being properly pressed.

One of the main arguments used is that unless the law is changed, the time will come when Illinois will have no state banks. National banks are free from the double liability on their stock-holders such as is imposed on state banks. In consequence, state banks are gradually decreasing in numbers and will eventually disappear if the situation is not changed.

National banks have had phenomenal growth in the state, while state banks have slipped backward in numbers. Only five state banks chartered have been issued since the bank moratorium in 1933, and 16 former state banks have surrendered their charters and have taken out national bank charters.

Those conversant with banking interests are positive that passing of all state banks from the scene in Illinois would be a detriment to the general business of the state.

The amendment must have a majority of the votes cast in favor of it, otherwise it will fail.

ORLAND PARK

The case against the owner of property at 143rd and Harlem for dumping garbage on same and creating a public nuisance and creating a health hazard, came up in the court of Justice Ray Brennan Monday morning. The hearing was quite exciting. The Judge ruled against any further dumping of garbage on the premises. The defendant was given 30 days in which to appeal the case to a higher court if he so desires, but all dumping of garbage must cease in the meantime.

Neighbors in the vicinity of the property, complained, and say flies by the million have been bred by the garbage, as well as rats.

New Lenox Team Defeats Brown Bombers 9 to 8

By Milton Borgess

On Sunday night, August 13, the New Lenox A. C. Softball team defeated the Brown Bombers of Joliet at New Lenox by a score of 9 to 8.

Smith, the New Lenox pitcher had a bad first inning and was relieved by Zelinski after seven runs had scored. However, the Bombers were held down to only one additional run by Zelinski who did some sensational relief pitching.

The game was won by a steady fire of scoring hits by the New Lenox team. Gewber, the New Lenox third baseman led the attack with 3 hits, a home run, a two bagger and a single.

This was New Lenox's nineteenth win out of twenty-two starts.

150th Anniversary of The Start West of The Nation

The Northwest Territory Celebration continues to interest and attract thousands of people in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota.

The Pioneer Caravan left Ispwich, Mass., December 3rd, recreated the trek of the original pioneers of 1787-88, re-enacted the historic landing at Marietta, April 7th, and continued on a six months' tour embracing 160 state and local celebrations in the Northwest Territory.

Freedom on the March — unique historical pageant presented by the 1938 pioneers in every stop-town along the route, has played to packed houses and large out-door crowds from Massachusetts to the Upper Mississippi valley. The Caravan with its "Theater on Wheels" has toured Ohio, northern Indiana, and Illinois. It will be in Wisconsin, Aug. 19-26; Illinois, Aug. 27 to Sept. 2; Indiana, Sept. 3 - 20; and return through southern Ohio to disband about the middle of October.

150th Anniversary of Civil Government in the Northwest Territory — will be celebrated as part of the program sponsored by the Federal Government to promote interest in and knowledge of American history and government. This event of July 15, 1788, first step in our national expansion beyond the original thirteen states, influenced the course of history and the form of government not only in states formed from the territory but also in the subsequently formed southern and western states — and through all these, in the nation, itself.

A National Memorial to the Start Westward of the Nation — designed by sculptor Gutzon Borglum, erected at Marietta on the site of General Arthur St. Clair's inauguration as first Governor of the northwest territory, and dedicated July 8th by President Roosevelt, is reproduced on the special 3-cent stamp which was issued July 15th with first day sale at Marietta. Governors, members of Congress, Federal and State Celebration Commissions, historians, authors of books on the northwest territory, and other distinguished Americans attend the dedication.

At Marietta, special emphasis was given to this anniversary. Stars for the Flag, mammoth pageant presented daily by a cast of 1200 on a 300 foot outdoor stage, is an educational and entertainment feature of interest to residents of all northwest territory states. . . . For visitors from these states, the Temple of the oldest American-chartered Masonic Lodge (American Union Lodge No. 1) is used as headquarters and for the showing of state exhibits and state motion pictures. . . special days, devoted to the history, places and people of these states were shown.

The Ordinance of 1787 and the Establishment of Government in the Northwest Territory in 1788 contributed enormously to the pre-eminence of this nation in the world today. Widespread participation of the public in the Northwest Territory Celebration project further into the future the constructive influence of these historic contributions.

Baseball Trial Camp Opens

No stones have been left unturned as final preparations have been made for the baseball trial camp to be held in Belleville, Illinois, for one week beginning Monday morning, August 15th, at nine o'clock. The camp is being conducted by the Springfield Browns Baseball Club, in co-operation with the St. Louis Browns of the American League.

Every boy in this vicinity who has ambitions to become a major league baseball player is invited to attend the camp and display his wares before scouts and experienced judges who will be in charge of the camp. No fee will be charged boys who attend the camp, and invitations are extended to every boy between the ages of 17 and 23 years, who is at least 5 ft. 5 in. tall and weighs 150 pounds or more.

Out-of-town boys who attend the camp must be able to finance their trip to and from Belleville for the camp. A stay of three or four days will be required of out-of-town boys as this is the time required by scouts and camp officials to determine whether or not a boy has sufficient ability. In the event a boy is signed to a contract and reports to a club this year or at the beginning of the 1939 season, his bus transportation to and from Belleville, plus his expenses while attending the camp, will be refunded. Boys showing outstanding ability will be assigned to play with clubs for the remainder of the present season. All that is required of a boy, other than the aforementioned, is that he bring his own shoes, glove and uniform and be ready for action Monday morning at nine o'clock.

The St. Louis Browns organization today offers great opportunities to a boy with high baseball ambitions, because of the fact that so many positions are open. Only recently, Glen McQuillen, Browns left fielder, was assigned to a contract and is now playing regularly with the Browns and hitting at a well deserved pace. Many of the present Browns have come up through their farm organization and have not had to spend the greater part of their career in the minor leagues. Such present day Brownie stars as Harland Clift, Howard Mills, McQuillen, Red Kress, Tommy Heath, Mel Mazzera and others have been developed right in the Browns organization at one time or another.

John MacWherter, president of the Springfield, Ill., Club announced yesterday that he had received definite word from William O. DeWitt, Brown Chieftain, that experienced scouts, men who have combed the minors for major league prospects for years, and seasoned baseball judges will be in charge of the camp, so it will be almost impossible for a boy with real baseball ability and talent to escape the eyes of these veterans.

All baseball roads for young aspirants are expected to head for Belleville, Monday when the camp opens at nine o'clock, and which will run until every boy attending the camp has been given a thorough trial. All that is required of a boy with the physical requirements is that he be able to finance his trip to Belleville and furnish his own glove, shoes and uniform. If he makes good and is offered a contract, expenses will be refunded.

LEMONT FIRE DEPT. TO HOLD HUGE CARNIVAL

Plans for the biggest celebration ever held in Lemont are being made by Lemont Volunteer Fire Department, in the form of a Firemen's Carnival on September 3, 4 and 5th. All civic, social and fraternal organizations in the community are assisting the Fire Department in promoting and carrying out the details of this event.

The reason for this celebration is that Lemont's Fire Department is to be presented with two new fire trucks and other apparatus, which were purchased by a Citizen's Committee from a fund which was subscribed to by citizens of Lemont and the adjacent farming community, on Labor Day, September 5th.

Many interesting and exciting events will take place during this three day celebration, which will be held in Legion Park, Lemont. The program calls for a Beauty Pageant on Saturday evening at 7:30 p. m., at which time "Miss Lemont" will be chosen. Also taking part in this pageant will be Miss Violet Sheets, who was chosen "Miss Chicago", by the American Legion in Soldier Field, Chicago, on July 4th, to represent Chicago in inviting the Legion to hold their 1939 National Convention in Chicago. "Miss America" will be accompanied by her Court of Honor of four beautiful young ladies who were "runner-ups" in that contest.

On Sunday, Sept., 4, there will be a benefit ball game in the Recreation Bowl at Lemont at 2:30 p. m., an Amateur Hour at 5:00 p. m., and a boxing match between the Lemont CYO and a CYO team from either Lockport or Joliet at 7:30 p. m.

A big parade will be held Labor Day, Sept., 5th at 1 p. m., in which Lemont's old fire equipment will be shown in contrast with the new. This parade will also be participated in by fire equipment from cities and towns near Lemont, as well as bands, drum and bugle corps, and floats entered by the various business enterprises.

During the afternoon there will be a Tug-of-War Hog Calling contest, and a band concert. There will be outdoor dancing on each of the evenings beginning at 9 p. m.

The Lemot Fire Department has extended a cordial invitation to the citizens of all its neighboring communities to come to Lemont on either of those days to help celebrate this event.

Football Time!

Crashing its way into the headlines once again comes football, king of autumn sports. Local interest in the game will reach a peak during the next few weeks. Pictured here is Capt. Joe Kilgrow of last year's Alabama championship team, who was picked on several all-American teams.

Back to School on a Bus

Throughout America this week youngsters will retrace their steps to the school room to begin another year's study. Some walk, others ride, but none of the riders have a more unique system than the students of North Carolina where a state-operated bus system is handled largely by the students themselves. About 50 per cent of the bus drivers are of school age, and woe to the motorist who considers them lightly. Drivers appoint monitors, fellow bus riders who stop traffic while youngsters cross the street. Upper picture shows a North Carolina monitor, while below are some of the busses ready to take students home after a day in school. Each afternoon shortly after 3 o'clock hundreds of these conveyances carry the children to the waiting parents.

A Modern Trading Post

Bob's swap shop will trade you a set of chipped dishes for an alarm clock that ticks when lying face down (only), for 15 cents in cash or almost anything else. Here, where the economic system is reduced to ultimate simplicity, reigns Bob, New York's most enthusiastic tradesman.

Everybody is "My good man" to Bob. Here a youngster would like to swap a baseball bat and glove (the season having ended) for a movie projector.

Bob and his wife live to a great extent on due bills, having eaten for a month in a restaurant in exchange for 50 chairs.

The gentleman would like a coat and a pair of pants for a radio. Bob is obliging. "Eventually," he says, "there's a customer for everything, clothing, ice boxes, sheet music, canoes, skis, white mice, pulp magazines and musical instruments."

DENMARK UNCOVERS HISTORIC SHIP

Denmark has discovered its first Viking ship grave.

The place where the ship lies, in a cornfield near the sea, has been roofed over and made an exhibit.

The unknown Viking, thus brought into the spotlight, was perhaps one of the Danes who harried Britain and other European lands, in wild voyages of adventure. He lived about 950 A. D. in the time of that quaintly named king, Harold Bluetooth.

When this unknown Viking died, his ship was dragged up from the sea to a high place. His favorite horses and dogs were brought on board and slain. Attendants came laden with the Viking's weapons and articles he might need on the mysterious voyages of the future world.

Men of the Mounted

by Captain
G. Elliott-Nightingale
Copyright, WNU

THEY DON'T "ALWAYS"
GET THEIR MAN

CONTRARY to general opinion, the Men of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police do not always get their man. Sometimes their assignments order them to go out and get a baby, for more than one northern settler was brought into the world by a Royal Mounted Policeman. Doctors and nurses were as scarce in the writer's early days in the northland, and both settlers and police were often called upon to deliver a baby, or amputate a badly shattered arm or leg. Furthermore, many a Man of the Mounted has been a lifelong friend of some Indian he had separated from an aching tooth, or for whom he had performed some worthwhile medical or first-aid services.

Sometimes, too, the lads who wear the scarlet and gold are called upon to conduct funeral services, and even to assist at weddings and christenings. The force, right from its inception, has been just as active and interested in crime prevention, as in criminal detection, therefore their association with Indians and settlers on other matters than police work gave them an opportunity to do quite a bit of missionary work along the lines of crime prevention. One old timer this writer knew had the habit of spotting youngsters inclined to be a bit wayward and more or less troublesome to parents and neighbors. Biding his time, this constable would soon have the headstrong youngster off on a little jaunt during which he would tell pointed stories showing how criminals and crooks finish up. He did not preach a doctrine of fear of the law, but rather respect for the law and the personal satisfaction one gets by behaving oneself. That lone constable steered many a youngster onto the right path.

Believe it or not, but there is not on this American continent a more versatile, resourceful, talented and accomplished body of men than the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Many of them could trot out more degrees and sheepskins than the same number of men in civil life, to say nothing of the years of worldwide practical experience these Men of the Mounted had known in some field of endeavor before joining the Force. You might find the navigator or naturalist, or the electrical expert tidying up a horse's hoof or dolling up saddle and accoutrements, and you must keep in mind the fact that these well-informed smooth-mannered chaps are wearing scarlet and gold because they hate the sight of the marts of trade and commerce.

The writer has lived and associated with Men of the Mounted who tucked themselves into their bedrolls with a well-spoken verse from a Grecian lullaby, and awoke quoting some timely bit from Cicero's orations. Yet, in action these scholars and worldly wise chaps are well-mannered, courteous, and sympathetic when necessary, but hard, firm and severe when their gentlemanly conduct does not go over very well with some miscreant or lawbreaker who somehow had the idea that the Men of the Mounted don't like to get their nice coats soiled, or their hands dirty. Many a blowhard and insolent troublemaker has learned, to his lifelong regret, that although the Men of the Mounted respect, and take care of their uniforms, they don't let that interfere with the enforcement of the law. On the other hand, these Men of the Mounted can be as broadminded as the wide world when they chance to meet some energetic and conscientious settler who has helped himself to some game out of season.

One time in Saskatchewan, the writer and two other surveyors ran short of meat, so we helped ourselves to game out of season. We had the birds all cooked to a queen's taste when our cabin door opened and in walked a Redcoat. We were caught, redhanded, and we knew it. Nevertheless, we asked the Man of the Mounted to sit in and have a bite with us. The meal finished, the Man of the Mounted rose to his feet with the assertion that he had just partaken of the finest rabbit pie he had had since he left England. He knew he had eaten forbidden game, but he also knew we were law-abiding citizens and that we had to have meat once in a while. They're a fine body of men, able to preach a sermon or deliver a baby, and they don't always get their man unless it happens to be the very man they're looking for, and then, they get him, and that's that. Their job is to "Maintain the Right" and they do just that. That motto is engraved on their buttons and badges, and also on their hearts.

United States Uses Much Cocoa

United States uses about 40 per cent of the world's cocoa, gets most of it from Africa, where cocoa-raising is carried on by the most primitive methods. Natives still carry two 60-pound "headloads" of cocoa beans for a day's trek from plantations to trading post.

The "Briny Toyshop" was closed for the day. Its tiny show window still displayed an enticing array of delightful playthings, but the latch was hard down on the door, and its little lady proprietress had retired to her favorite low rocker by a rear window facing the sea.

The most persistent youth in the small sea-faring village rattled the door, but in vain. Miss Matilda Bell did not even hear.

There seemed more than ordinary magic in the glowing spell cast by the sun at this close of day. The old-fashioned garden sloping to the rocky shore seemed a fairy place. The sea was many-hued, dusky, wondrous, and its melody came pleasantly to Miss Matilda. There were dreams in Miss Matilda's eyes as she watched; not the happy, hopeful dreams of youth, but the deeper, sadder dreams of one who has lived long.

Miss Matilda was so much a part of her surroundings that she had ceased to notice them in detail. Her mind had flown back nearly 50 years, to the time when she had not the faintest thought of ever being a little, elderly, sweet-faced lady sitting by herself in the twilight.

To the time when she was a young, adventurous girl pledging her troth to a dashing young naval officer. Even now her eyes grew dim as the memories came drifting in on the breeze. Dream pictures blotted out the garden, the rocks, the sea itself, and Miss Matilda felt herself in the arms of her young lover, so tender, so dear—

And he had sailed away, full of hope and happy anticipations of the day when he should return to make her his wife. Miss Matilda's eyes blurred. That day had never come. There had been a fire aboard the ship—and the young officer, who belonged heart and soul to Matilda Bell, had given his life for another.

Years had taken away that first tragic grief, but Miss Matilda had loved too deeply to forget. How she wished she had been with him! Sometimes he seemed to speak to her in the voice of the sea, and she would say that she was coming—some day soon, very soon—coming to be with him.

On the rocks below Miss Matilda's cottage two figures were silhouetted against the dull red sky.

"But, dear girl!"—the man's voice was tender, serious—"you don't know what the life is. I do—and I wouldn't condemn any woman to it, least of all—you. It will be a torture without you—but it wouldn't be fair to take you."

The girl's straight, sweet gaze held his steadily.

"But, Tom, don't you see I want to go? It may be years before you come back. Our marriage—that-is-to-be is going to be

Wise and Otherwise

"A child must have a chance to express its ideas," says a psychologist. Yes, but not on plain wallpaper!

"Girls were quicker in their movements eighty years ago," says a writer. They got a bustle on then.

"And they call America the land of free speech," said the disgruntled Scot when the telephone operator told him to put a nickel in the box.

The best husbands are those who marry young. If a man waits till he has money it hurts more to pay it out.

true partnership, Tommy boy, and it must begin by my going to South America with you now. I can face anything—with you!"

The two silhouettes suddenly converged into one as Tom said huskily:

"Bless you, sweetheart, you're coming with me. We'll play the game of life squarely—together."

And up in the little dusky window above the garden, with the sea still crooning a low love song, Miss Matilda had come into her own.

Lesson for August 21

HANNAH: GODLY MOTHERHOOD

LESSON TEXT—1 Samuel 1:9-18; 2:1-5.
GOLDEN TEXT—Her children arise up, and call her blessed. Proverbs 31:28.

"Godly Motherhood" — All the power and grace of the infinite God working in and through the most tender and at the same time most potent human relationship—motherhood! There indeed is the solution of many of our national and social problems. For we agree with the poet that man, who regards himself as being mighty, ruling over land and sea, must defer to a mightier power.

"For the hand that rocks the cradle
Is the hand that rules the world."

Hannah was the mother of Samuel, who became one of Israel's outstanding leaders—a priest, a prophet, and "the maker of kings." God needed a great man, so He chose for him a great mother.

Our study for today will be topical rather than textual and extended to related portions in chapters 1 and 2. We consider Hannah as a mother who was spiritual and sacrificial, but at the same time practical in her daily life and service.

I. Spiritual.

Many are the tributes offered to mothers, but none has deeper significance than the testimony of a boy or girl that their mother has led them both by precept and example to have faith in God. Though other advantages may be beyond the reach even of the most self-denying mother, this most important of all benefits she may bring her children, but only if she herself is an earnest and faithful follower of the Lord.

1. Hannah trusted God in her hour of trial and sorrow (1:10). Although her husband was a man of good qualities, he had followed the custom of his times and taken a second wife. Hannah, childless in the presence of Peninnah and her children, was in deep sorrow. But she knew where to take her burdens; she brought them to the Lord in prayer. 2. She prayed—fervently and effectually (1:17, 18, compare James 5:16b). Mother's prayers have followed many a wayward boy and girl and brought them back to God. When every other influence for good had been swept aside, they have been unable to forget mother's prayers. One wonders what will happen to boys and girls who go out to face a wicked and bewildering world, with the memory of a prayerless, worldly mother to blight rather than to bless them.

3. She recognized children as a gift of God (1:11). And surely they are. Christian men and women should protest by both word and deed against the vicious modern theory that children are a sort of biological accident to be avoided.

II. Sacrificial.

The most precious possession a woman can have is a child of her own. It was, then, the deepest and finest sacrifice of a noble mother-heart when she

1. Dedicated her boy to God, even before his birth (1:11). Yet this act so fine and commendable was in reality only an intelligent recognition of the fact that children are a gift of God. Your children and mine belong to God. Let us not stand in His way (or their way) as He graciously leads them out into service for Him.

2. She kept her promise (1:24-28). Many parents have solemnly dedicated their children to God before their birth, and then later the prospect of separation from them has been too much for the parents, and the promise to God has been thrust aside. The writer has on many occasions seen young men and women weep with broken-hearted dismay because a mother or father has forbidden them to go to China, Africa, or elsewhere at God's call. Mother, have you kept your promise to God regarding your boy, your girl?

III. Practical.

Hannah not only promised her boy to God; she made the completion of that promise certain.

1. By guiding her boy in the right way (1:24). As a matter of fact, she went with him to the temple. A mother who "sends" her boy to Sunday school or church will never help him like the mother of whom it may be said "she brought him unto the house of the Lord."

2. By providing for her boy (2:18, 19). There is no more tender and meaningful story in all literature than that of Hannah bringing her boy his "little coat." It is still true that the best "support" a missionary of the Cross can have is a home that "stands by."

The story is told of a missionary candidate who had no "board" back of her but the "washboard" of a godly mother, and who made a valiant and useful servant in the foreign field. Such an arrangement may not be the most desirable and it really should not be necessary if God's people would give, but it has its glorious advantages.

Such a mother as Hannah would have such a son as Samuel of whom it is said that he "was in favour both with the Lord, and also with men" (2:26).

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses the Food Value of Ice Cream

Nationally Known Food Authority Describes Its Place in the Diet

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th Street, New York City.

ONE of the most significant contributions of modern nutritional science was the discovery of the importance of the protective foods—milk, eggs, fresh fruits and vegetables. These foods abound in the minerals and vitamins that help to insure normal growth and health, and safeguard us against the deficiency diseases.

In this group, milk and dairy products made from it assume a commanding position because milk is the best and most practical source of calcium and vitamins A and G. These substances should be consumed in much greater proportions than at present if we are to increase health and efficiency and improve our chances for longevity.

The first rule in providing adequate amounts of the protective foods is to allow daily a quart of milk for every child and at least a pint for each adult. This amount of milk need not always be consumed as a beverage, however. It may be used in cooked dishes or eaten in the form of cheese and ice cream.

Composition of Ice Cream

Ice cream is often regarded as a confection, but it deserves to be classed among our most nutritious foods. It is composed of varying proportions of cream, milk, sugar, flavoring and frequently a binder or stabilizer such as gelatin. The composition varies somewhat between the home-made and the commercial product, and the commercial product differs in various states. That is because standards governing the butter fat content differ widely so that the requirement ranges from 8 to 14 per cent. Most large commercial companies produce an ice cream with about 12 per cent fat.

Guard Against Contamination

Some states require the pasteurization of the milk or cream used in manufacturing ice cream; others stipulate that the entire mix must be pasteurized before freezing. These measures are desirable, as ice cream requires the same scrupulous care that should be given to milk and cream.

Because of the possibilities for contamination, several precautions should be observed in buying ice cream. Choose cream manufactured by a reputable concern. Be sure to buy from a dealer who keeps it well frozen, for ice cream that has been melted and frozen again may be dangerous, owing to the opportunity for the multiplication of bacteria while it was melted. See to it, also, that the dealer uses sanitary methods in dispensing.

Home-Made Ice Cream

An easy way to make certain of the purity of the ice cream you serve is to make this delicious dessert at home. Motor-driven freezers are available, as well as those that are manually operated. And the homemaker with an automatic refrigerator finds it easier to make ice cream than to prepare many less interesting and nutritious desserts.

Ice cream powders which simplify the preparation of home-made ice cream, can be obtained unflavored, or in a variety of flavors, including lemon and maple, in addition to the popular vanilla, chocolate and strawberry. The ice cream powders may be used with milk or a combination of milk and cream to produce a healthful dessert.

sert suitable for every member of the family. They also may be used for less rich but equally refreshing milk or buttermilk sherbets.

A canned freezing mix is likewise available and is especially nice in a fruit flavor as it contains pieces of the whole fruit.

A Comparison With Milk

If we regard one-sixth of a quart of ice cream as an average serving, and compare it with one cup of milk, we make the interesting discovery that there is a close relation between the two. The ice cream provides about 24 more calories and only a trifle less protein, calcium, phosphorus, iron and vitamin A. There is considerably less vitamin G, but ice cream is nevertheless considered an excellent source of this important vitamin.

A Healthful Food

It then becomes apparent why ice cream is considered as an excellent food, not only for adults but for children and convalescents, and why one outstanding authority urges the liberal use of ice cream as a means of increasing the vitamin A content of the diet.

Plain ice cream may be used interchangeably with simple milk puddings. Rich mixtures, such as those filled with nuts and crystallized fruits, rank with the heartier desserts and should follow a lighter meal.

Ice cream is so rich in nourishment that it should not be consumed indiscriminately between meals, but should always be considered as part of the day's ration. When that is done, one nutrition authority states that its beneficial effects can hardly be overestimated.

Effect on Digestion

One frequently hears the question, "Doesn't the eating of ice cream retard the digestion of other foods consumed at the same time?" The answer is that it does slow up slightly the emptying time of the stomach but this delay is without significance and is more than compensated for by the important nutrients it provides.

Many people believe that it is injurious to follow ice cream with hot coffee. But it has been demonstrated that just the opposite is true. The coffee raises the temperature of the food in the stomach and thus modifies the cooling effect of the ice cream.

Another common question concerns the effect of cake or pie a la mode. Experiments indicate that eating ice cream with cake or pie produces a more satisfactory gastric juice than when either of these foods is eaten alone. One must take into consideration, however, that cake or pie a la mode is a rich combination and plan the remainder of the meal accordingly.

Use More Ice Cream

It has been estimated that five billion pounds of milk are used each year in the production of commercial ice cream, which provides about three gallons of ice cream per capita. The amounts of ice cream made at home will raise this figure somewhat. But the amount consumed may well be further increased, because when properly made from pure ingredients, ice cream deserves to rank with other dairy products among our most wholesome and nourishing foods.

Fire Threatens St. Michael's Church In Orland Park

St. Michael's Catholic church at Orland Park, as well as the residence of Jerry Conover and a garage on the John Helenhouse property were endangered by fire early Sunday morning when a short circuit on an automobile belonging to Rev. James Rooney, priest of St. Michael's, ignited the car and the flames quickly spread through the garage located in the rear of the Conover place. Two other cars also stored in the same garage caught fire.

About two o'clock Sunday morning Father Rooney returned from a trip and placed his car in the garage. A few minutes later, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Balleau, who were returning from a trip to Michigan, turned off of 143rd street at the Christ Lutheran church corner when Mrs. Balleau saw flames coming from the garage in the rear of the Conover place. Both Mr. and Mrs. Balleau ran over to the Helenhouse home and aroused Mr. Helenhouse who is the Fire Chief. The Fire Department was quickly summoned.

Chief Helenhouse took charge of the chemicals while other Fire Department members were running the hose over to the nearest fire plug on 143rd street. He succeeded in keeping the flames from spreading to the Conover home. A gasoline tank of one of the cars exploded shooting the burning fluid high into the air and in coming down had ignited the chief's clothing. He turned the chemicals on himself and put out the fire. He suffered quite a number of severe burns. As soon as the water was turned on the properties in danger, were saved. Had it not been for the heroic work of Chief Helenhouse in keeping the flames from reaching the Conover property the fire might easily have spread through the entire block. The garage of Chief Helenhouse being near by was also endangered but a garden hose was supplied and a steady stream of water was played on it preventing it from catching on fire. The 3 cars were completely wrecked. Everything was burned off of them that could burn. But it is understood the loss is covered by insurance.

The fire department was hampered in their work by fire fans interfering with the running of the hose also in running over the hose with automobiles which resulted in about 50 feet of hose being ruined. The state law provides a penalty for driving over a hose in case of fire.

Nearly all of Orland Park was aroused by the fire siren and were at the fire scene.

Mokena Flower Show Opens

August 23rd

From views expressed by a number of parents we gather that the adults too, would like to make a miniature garden and show how their gardens would look if their dreams came through, or how they would improve our village if they were chosen general landscape garden architect. Well go to it dear folks, the more the merrier, but let us remind you that you will have to step on it if you want to keep up with the children.

We suggest that you drive or walk through town and pick out an unsightly or bare spot and then go home, fill a shallow box with sand or earth and turn the neglected lot into a beauty spot.

Or build the little house in your box which you have always dreamed about. At the moment you may not realize how fascinating this little game will be and how much pleasure you will derive by arranging it. What would you do with the property of the old school house or the bare sketch along the railroad tracks south of the depot? How would you improve the appearance of front street? Do not worry about material to be used to carry out your ideas in these little landscapes. There is a great deal to choose from. Just let your imagination run away with you. A little doll house, a bird house or some little cartoon can be used for your residence. Twigs and branches will represent trees, a turkish green towel will give you a perfect lawn, free of dandelions. You could carve a bird bath, or garden furniture out of soap, colored popcorn will make small flowers if put on a tooth pick, a bit of glass or a mirror will give you a lovely pool, there is an almost endless number of articles you could use.

Can't you just see, how much fun it is going to be? If hubby has always taken care of the garden so far, here is your chance, dear wife, to show him what you would do if you were in charge of it.

Encourage your children to take part in this contest. It will surely be entertaining and educational for them. Remember: You may choose any scene you like to. Assemble it in a shallow box, large or small or arrange your exhibit in several boxes and group them together at the school if more convenient.

The amateur movie taken of some gardens of Mokena, will be presented at 8 p. m.

The 4-H girls club will delight you with a program. Get busy and let's see who will carry off the prize which the club will give to the winner in the miniature landscape contest. There will be a door prize.

Let it no longer be said that Mokena is a dead town, but let us prove that we are really going places. Boost Mokena.

Mrs. L. R. Thiel, Press Chair.
